VENUS & ADONIS

BY WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

A Bell Shakespeare and Malthouse Melbourne co-production developed through Mind’s Eye

TEACHERS’ KIT
TEACHERS’ KIT: VENUS AND ADONIS

CONTENTS

BELL SHAKESPEARE
ABOUT THIS KIT

SYNOPSIS: VENUS AND ADONIS

BACKGROUND: VENUS AND ADONIS

THE CONTEMPORARY VISION: VENUS AND ADONIS

CHARACTERS: VENUS AND ADONIS

THEMATIC CONCERNS OF THE PRODUCTION

EDUCATIONAL CONTEXTS - VENUS AND ADONIS

PRE-PERFORMANCE ACTIVITIES
ENGLISH
DRAMA
MUSIC

POST-PERFORMANCE ACTIVITIES
ENGLISH
DRAMA
MUSIC

THE POEM: VENUS AND ADONIS

REFERENCES
Launched in 1990, Bell Shakespeare is a dynamic, Australian theatre company with a broad mandate to educate and entertain the public. The Company strives to present – at the highest possible standard – the works of William Shakespeare, and, from time to time, other classics.

Bell Shakespeare is Australia’s only national touring Shakespeare theatre company. We are committed to taking our productions and education programmes to audiences in capital cities, regional and rural centres across Australia. We are also committed to the development and training of actors and an ongoing examination of the role of theatre in the life of the community. We believe that great theatre is a source of spiritual enrichment, wisdom and pleasure.

BELL SHAKESPEARE EDUCATION ONLINE

Bell Shakespeare’s education website is useful, relevant and entertaining. www.bellshakespeare.com.au/education is the key to all your Shakespearean information needs.

About This Kit

This kit has been devised for use in Senior English, Drama and Music with preparatory and follow-up exercises for students. Exercises may be copied to distribute to students and are denoted as

- ENGLISH  Written activities
- DRAMA    Physical activities
- MUSIC    Music activities

It is recommended that teachers take students through the content of this Teachers’ Kit and read the poem of VENUS AND ADONIS prior to attending the performance.

This Teachers’ Kit has been devised by Linda Lorenza BA Grad Dip Ed COGE MA, Head of Education at Bell Shakespeare.

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
SYNOPSIS: VENUS AND ADONIS

Adonis sets out to hunt one afternoon. Venus sees him and her passion is ignited by his beauty. She plucks him from his horse and pushes him to the ground, offering to release him only in exchange for ‘one sweet kiss’. Adonis agrees but then refuses to kiss her. Venus attempts to seduce him with flattery, then criticism, finally advocating ‘the law of nature’ as she lies beside the beautiful youth on the grass in the afternoon sun. Adonis, fearing sunburn, wants to leave. When Venus is reduced to tears, Adonis’s irresistible cheek dimples only torment her further.

Still intent on hunting, Adonis leaps up, but his stallion, sexually excited by the sight of a mare, flees into a wood. Adonis sulks while Venus recommends the example set by his horse and he should seize the opportunity for love. Adonis says he only likes boar-hunting and is too young for love.

Venus faints. Thinking her dead, Adonis attempts to revive her with a kiss. Venus is delighted. As night begins to fall Adonis consents to only one more kiss before departing. As they kiss the couple fall to the ground. Venus is even more impassioned. She wants to meet again tomorrow but Adonis says that he is going boar hunting. Venus prophesies that unless he hunts a less vicious beast he will die. Adonis says he is going to meet his friends. Venus argues that the moonlight invites him to remain and love her, but he says that what she calls Love is in fact Lust. He runs off leaving Venus alone and upset.

Wandering in the wilderness, Venus hears and then sings with the echoes of her lamenting voice. The lark sings as day breaks releasing Venus from her night’s anguish. She hears the barks of dogs on a hunt and sees a boar with blood dripping from its mouth. She rails against Death until the distant voice of the hunter persuades her that Adonis is alive. Rushing to greet him she is devastated to arrive upon his bloodied corpse. She sees his groin was pierced by the boar and thinks that even the boar must have been in love with Adonis. She reasons that she would have killed him first had she had tusks, so passionately did she desire to kiss him. Staining her face with blood she prophesies that sorrows will forever accompany love. Adonis’s body melts ‘like vapour from her sight’ and from his blood on the ground a purple flower appears. Venus pluck the flower vowing to kiss the flower forever. She mounts her chariot to return home and mourn.
BACKGROUND: VENUS AND ADONIS

Venus and Adonis was Shakespeare’s most popular poem during his lifetime. It was written during 1592-3 and first published in 1593. As with all his poems Shakespeare draws from the works of Ovid. In this case from, Metamorphoses. Ovid’s take of Venus and Adonis sees Venus’ love returned by Adonis whereas Shakespeare took a tangent from the source material giving Venus a more human quality and her seductive manoeuvres are constantly rejected. In his day Shakespeare would recognise his poems over his plays, as they were perhaps considered low-brow by contrast. In the dedication Shakespeare called this poem the ‘first heir of my invention’.

The poem is composed in 6-line stanzas in rhyming ababcc for the total 1194 lines. The poem was hugely popular in Shakespeare’s day being published and reprinted in quarto editions until 1675. Late in the 17th century the poem lost favour with the rhyming stanzas perceived as laboured and the tonal shifts confusing. Romantic era poets such as Coleridge and Keats used the poem for inspiration and in the 20th century the poem acquired renewed interest.

Venus and Adonis and Shakespeare’s other great poem The Rape Of Lucrece were perhaps his greatest literary successes in his day and were both dedicated to Henry Wriothesley, the Earl of Southampton.

Both these long poems examine desire but they vary in theme, form and tone.

Venus and Adonis presents Venus alternatively as sensual love goddess and sex-crazed buffoon. Concluding with the death of Adonis and Venus’ mournful elegy. The lovers somehow removed from yet representative of the tragic human experience.

The Rape Of Lucrece drawn from Ovid’s Fasti or “Chronicles” was first published in 1594. This poem graphically recounts the story of a woman raped by her husband’s friend. The disturbing detail provides an examination of the dark unsettling corners of human conscience. This poem is composed in ‘rhyme royal’ a demanding stanza form used by Chaucer. Each stanza contains seven lines of iambic pentameter rhyming ababbcc.
THE CONTEMPORARY VISION: VENUS AND ADONIS

The following article discusses the contemporary vision in this production of Venus And Adonis.

Venus And Adonis
Elissa Blake, Metro, Sydney Morning Herald
February 6, 2009

TWO seductive singing voices. Two inventive minds. Four heaving breasts. These are the tools Venus, the great goddess of love, has to woo the young, handsome Adonis in a new stage adaptation of William Shakespeare's enduring poem Venus And Adonis.

Directed by Marion Potts for the Bell Shakespeare Company, Venus is played by two actors, Melissa Madden Gray and Susan Prior, who use every trick in the book to entice the drop-dead gorgeous Adonis, who is played by the audience.

Set in a luxury hotel room, the two women primp and preen and morph into different characters to try to snare the object of their affection. They play the virgin, dominatrix, sexy librarian, mad woman, rapist, animal and vampire. All this dressed in big heels, luxuriant wigs, corsets, stockings and accompanied by winking, lip-licking, come-hither looks, back arching and simulations of rutting.

"We thought we'd give Venus double the ammunition by casting two actors in the role," Potts says. "The female voice in the poem was so strong that we decided to strengthen it by giving her two voices to sing with, four breasts instead of two and two brains to negotiate the difficult terrain this seduction ends up in. It alludes to her powers of a goddess more than channeling through just one performer."

The story is simple. The immortal Venus has fallen in love with Adonis, a young human boy. She offers herself to him. But he simply doesn't fancy her. He'd rather go hunting with his mates. She won't give up and relentlessly pursues him. Her lust is overwhelming. In the end, Adonis dies. Was it the wild boar that killed him in the hunt? Or was it Venus's suffocating love that snuffed out his light?

"The play is full of ambiguities," Gray says. "We don't know if the two women really are a goddess or if they are two strange sisters or lovers in a modern hotel room. It's not clear whether we've murdered somebody already and we're going back through it in our minds or if we are imagining the whole thing. It could be a game that we play every day, compelled to play out this tragic story."

Gray says it's a difficult role to play because Adonis is "so frightfully young" and Venus, who could be any age, is sexually mature and, well, voracious.

"Some interpretations say he might be gay and Venus is forcing herself on him, raping him. It's really challenging to play that ethically. But I reconcile it by saying she's a deity and she's never had to learn about morals or ethics before now. Through loss she gains ethics. It's an incredibly moving piece for everybody - anybody who has ever been in love and had their heart broken or experienced loss."

Gray and Prior have never worked together before and had to become very close very quickly in rehearsals. "It's like an ensemble piece for two people," Prior says. "We had to connect very fast. But it was easy because we really liked each other and now we look after each other on stage.

"It's a lot of fun seducing the audience. We look directly into people's eyes and wink at them. We tease the audience. I can see people nudging each other in the ribs and saying 'oooh-err'. It's all very tongue-in-cheek."

But by the end of the 70-minute show, Venus learns that true love can be painful in all its beauty.

Potts says the prophecy made by the grief-stricken Venus at the end of the poem is one of the reasons she wanted to bring it to life on stage. "It's so moving," Potts says. "It's part-curse and part-celebration but it so truthfully defines love as we know it, even today."

The immortal Venus says:

Here I prophesy.
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend …
[Love shall] Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging-mad and silly-mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

The great goddess of love proves she is still revealing for a modern audience.
CHARACTERS: VENUS AND ADONIS

VENUS
From: http://www.pantheon.org/articles/v/venus.html

Venus was originally a vegetation goddess and patroness of gardens and vineyards. She became the Roman goddess of love and beauty. Through Greek influence, she was equated with Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of love, beauty and sexual rapture.

The cult of Venus originated from Ardea and Lavinium in Latium. Venus is the daughter of Jupiter. Her lovers include Mars and Vulcan and are modeled on the affairs of Aphrodite. The importance of Venus increased through the influence of several Roman political leaders. The dictator Sulla made her his patroness. Julius Caesar and the emperor Augustus named her the ancestor of their family. Caesar introduced the cult of Venus Genetrix, the goddess of motherhood and marriage. He built a temple for her in 46 BCE. She was also honored in the temple of Mars Ultor. The last great temple of Venus was built by the emperor Hadrianus near the Colosseum in 135 CE. Roman statues and portraits of Venus are usually identical to the Greek representations of Aphrodite.

ADONIS
From: http://www.pantheon.org/articles/v/adonis.html

Adonis features in Greek and Roman mythology and also has Semitic origins. The name "Adonis" is a variation of the Semitic word Adona meaning "lord", and is also a name referred to in the Old Testament.

In Greek mythology there is confusion as to Adonis' origin. Hesiod considers this Greek hero to be the son of Phoenix and Aephesiboea. Yet Apollodorus calls him the son of Cinyras and Metharme. It is more widely accepted that Aphrodite, the Greek goddess of sexual love, compelled Myrrha (or Smyrna) to commit incest with Theias, her father, the king of Assyria. Myrrha's nurse helped her with this trickery to become pregnant, and when Theias discovered this he chased her with a knife. To avoid his wrath the gods turned her into a myrrh tree. The tree later burst open, allowing Adonis to emerge. An alternative explanation says that after Myrrha slept with her father she hid in a forest where Aphrodite changed her into a tree. Theias struck the tree with an arrow, causing the tree to open and Adonis to be born. A further version says a wild boar open the tree with its tusks and freed the child; this is considered to be a foreshadowing of his death.

Once the child was born Aphrodite was so moved by his beauty that she sheltered him and entrusted him to Persephone, who was also taken by his beauty and refused to give him back. The dispute between these two goddesses was settled by Zeus. In some versions it was settled by Calliope for Zeus. The resulting agreement was that Adonis would spend one-third of every year with each goddess and the last third of the year wherever he chose. He always chose to spend two-thirds of the year with Aphrodite. This went on till his death, where he was fatally wounded by a wild boar. An incident said to be caused by Artemis or by Aphrodite's lover, Ares, who was jealous of Adonis. Apollo is also said to be responsible because his son, Erymanthus, had seen Aphrodite naked and she blinded him for it. The story of Adonis provides a basis for the origin of myrrh and the origin of the rose, which grew from each drop of blood that fell.

The story of Adonis, despite its variants, is certainly another example of the dying vegetation god and the close association with Aphrodite or Persephone also brings the myth of Adonis into line with the many other mated couples, where the male partner dies and is reborn, that is spread across North Africa and the Near East.

In Roman mythology he was loved by Venus, the goddess of sexual love.
THEMATICAL CONCERNS OF THE PRODUCTION
Motifs* and Imagery
*Motifs are recurring structures, contrasts, or literary devices that can help to develop and inform the text's major themes.

EROTIC DESIRE

Erotic desire is the key theme in the poem. Many of the metaphors for sexual desire or pleasure are conventional and sensuous such as burning, steaming, hunting, hungering, thirsting and dying.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth,
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.
[547-552]

Shakespeare is innovative in using the imagery of animals and landscapes in a sexual connotation:

I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale;
Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
Stray, lower, where the pleasure fountains lie.
[231-34]

This production draws on the personas of Venus in her seduction of Adonis, highlighting the different personas a woman may evoke in her efforts to seduce a man.

Marion Potts discusses these in the podcast.

EDUCATIONAL CONTEXTS - VENUS AND ADONIS

This production is suitable only for Year 12 students. It is recommended that teachers inform their students that some of the performance contains material of sexual nature without nudity. The cabaret-esque performance style includes direct address, spoken word, song and mime. Some innuendo in the performance may be considered inappropriate for students below Year 12.

TEACHING AND LEARNING PERSPECTIVES FOR NSW STUDENTS

HSC ENGLISH EXTENSION 1.
This could be used as an additional text for:

MODULE B: Texts and Ways of Thinking
Elective 2: Postmodernism
This piece may help students in contemplating the play DEAD WHITE MALES which itself comments on Shakespeare. The contemporary interpretation of the Shakespearean poem and the design of the production may stimulate students' thoughts on texts and how we think about them.

MODULE C: Language and Values
Elective 3: Gendered Language
This production may be useful to students studying Twelfth Night in this module. The original poem contains a diverse array of language in classic Shakespearean prose which is presented in a contemporary context in the performance.
The production uses two female actors presenting the various personas of the seductress and in itself reflects gendered use of language in contemporary context. The absence of the male – Adonis – highlights the language in performance.

HSC ENGLISH EXTENSION 2
This task requires student to work independently to plan and complete a Major Work in the form of an extended composition including documentation and reflection on the process.
This production may assist students to
- Develop insights and formulate and communicate complex concepts;
- Compose a substantial and sustained original major work that effectively engages audience and is appropriate to purpose, concept and medium;
- Exhibit sophisticated and highly developed ability to articulate, monitor and reflect on processes of investigation, interpretation, analysis and composition.

HSC DRAMA
This work may stimulate students’ ideas for Individual Projects.

Individual Project: Scriptwriting
The production may assist students in:
Concept
- Creating a script for a complete play or live performance;
- Developing a concept that is original and has clarity and integrity.
Realisation
- Developing dramatic images, dramatic focus and dramatic tension.
Conventions and Practicalities
- Script writing conventions such as layout, character list, dialogue formatting, stage setting, directions and effects;
- Practicality for Production such as scene and costume changes, venue style, size of production, cast size, scenic and technical effect.

Critical Analysis: Directors’ Folio
This production may assist students in analysing and developing
- Originality, practicality and clarity in a director’s concept/vision;
- Effective communication of the director’s concept/vision;
- Effective use of key theatrical elements, features, effects or images which contribute to dramatic meaning;
- Integration and unity of dramatic and theatrical elements.

Critical Analysis: Portfolio of Theatre Criticism
This production will provide students with an unusual and challenging work to consider for
- Identifying the style, design and ideas in the production;
- Evaluating significant aspects of the production;
- Distinguishing and commenting on the different ways the script, the director, the designers and performers contribute to the production.

Individual Project: Design (Costume, Lighting, Set)
This production will provide students with an unusual and challenging work to consider for
- Effective interpretation of the play realised in a directorial concept/vision;
- Understanding of the characters/roles — social standing, period, place;
- Suitability to the dramatic and technical needs of the characters/roles.

This production may stimulate the student’s thoughts about
- Design/Concept,
- Appropriateness, and
- Execution.

HSC MUSIC 2 AND EXTENSION
Music provides a powerful medium for the development of general competencies considered effective for the acquisition of effective, higher-order thinking skills. These skills are necessary for further education, work and everyday life.

This production may provide student with an unusual and challenging work to consider for syllabus requirements in Music.

Performance outcomes:
- Evaluation and discussion sessions on all aspects of the performances of others;
- Articulates sophisticated arguments supported by musical evidence and demonstrates independence of thought with regard to the interpretation of music performed;
- Sophisticated understanding of the concepts of music and their relationship to each other with reference to works performed;
- Critically analyses the use of musical concepts to present a stylistic interpretation of music performed.
Composition outcomes:
- Critical evaluation and discussion sessions on all aspects of the compositions of others;
- Articulates sophisticated arguments supported by musical evidence and demonstrates independence of thought with regard to compositional processes, techniques and devices used, showing the emergence of a personal style;
- Demonstrates a sophisticated understanding of the concepts of music and their relationship to each other with reference to works composed;
- Presents, discusses and evaluates the problem-solving process with regard to composition and the realisation of the composition;
- Critically analyses the use of musical concepts to present a personal compositional style.

Musicology outcomes:
- Critical evaluation and discussion sessions on all aspects of his/her own research and essay work and on the research and essays of others;
- Articulates sophisticated arguments supported by musical evidence and demonstrates independence of thought in the development of a hypothesis and argument in the chosen area of research;
- Demonstrates a sophisticated understanding of the concepts of music and their relationship to each other with reference to research undertaken and essay writing;
- Presents, discusses and evaluates the problem-solving process and the development and realisation of a research project;
- Critically analyses the use of the musical concepts to articulate their relationship to the style analysed.
THE POEM AND ITS STRUCTURE.
The poem is composed in 6-line stanzas in rhyming ababcc for the total 1194 lines. The poem was hugely popular in Shakespeare's day. Late in the 17th century the poem lost favour with the rhyming stanzas perceived as laboured and the tonal shifts confusing. Romantic era poets such as Coleridge and Keats used the poem for inspiration and in the 20th century the poem acquired renewed interest.

ENGLISH ACTIVITY ONE

ACTIVITY ONE
1. Select a stanza from Venus And Adonis
   1) identify the form ababcc structure
   2) identify the imagery in the stanza
   3) what is the mood or emotion portrayed in this stanza

2. Compare with the Keats' excerpt below with a stanza from Venus And Adonis.
   Comment on:
   1) structure,
   2) language.

3. Keats' Ode on Melancholy was written in 1819 and first published a year later. This is one of the least-discussed of the odes. It is lyrical and affecting; the imagery is startling and vivid. It is also psychologically interesting for it clearly shows how Keats's equated pain with pleasure (alternatively, sorrow with happiness or desire with fear.) One cannot exist without the other. Antithesis was often used by Shakespeare. Keats writes: 'Ay, in the very temple of Delight, / Veil'd Melancholy has her sovran shrine'. In this ode, beauty must die; joy bids adieu; pleasure turns to poison. Keats connects each positive feeling with its melancholy end.
   (from http://englishhistory.net/keats/poetry/odeonmelancholy.html)
   a) Identify the form in the stanzas below
   b) Highlight or circle the positive and negative images and ideas in the stanzas.

      No, no, go not to Lethe, neither twist
      Wolf's-bane, tight-rooted, for its poisonous wine;
      Nor suffer thy pale forehead to be kiss'd
      By nightshade, ruby grape of Proserpine;
      Make not your rosary of yew-berries,
      Nor let the beetle, nor the death-moth be
      Your mournful Psyche, nor the downy owl
      A partner in your sorrow's mysteries;
      For shade to shade will come too drowsily,
      And drown the wakeful anguish of the soul.

      But when the melancholy fit shall fall
      Sudden from heaven like a weeping cloud,
      That fosters the droop-headed flowers all,
      And hides the green hill in an April shroud;
      Then glut thy sorrow on a morning rose,
      Or on the rainbow of the salt sand-wave,
      Or on the wealth of globed peonies;
      Or if thy mistress some rich anger shows,
      Emprison her soft hand, and let her rave,
      And feed deep, deep upon her peerless eyes.
CREATING IMAGERY

Shakespeare’s imagery is vivid in creating the essence of lust, and erotic desire.
In today’s society what language might be relevant in a poem about desire and seduction?

ACTIVITY TWO

Consider the imagery and mood contained in the following stanzas from Venus And Adonis:

```plaintext
Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain
Then be my deer, since I am such a park;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.'240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open’d their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking? 250
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!
```

Rewrite one or all of these stanzas using imagery, vocabulary and terminology that you think represents of one of the options listed below.

1. Technology
2. Television
3. Media - newspaper, radio
4. Advertising
5. Religion
6. Politics
7. A specific Cultural group
8. Select your own option.

EXTENSION: Explore the structure and language in other works by Keats and Colleridge to find any link to that in Venus And Adonis.

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
PRE-PERFORMANCE ACTIVITIES

DRAMA ACTIVITY ONE

To create this dramatic performance of the poem the language, the connotations and sounds of the vocabulary were explored.

ACTIVITY ONE
Voice activity on the language in a stanza.
Try speaking the following stanza in the following ways:

1. Everyday speaking
2. Stress or over-enunciate the consonants
3. Extend and wallow in the vowels
4. Speak to create the sense of the horse being described
5. Speak as if to seduce

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

List the following for each way of speaking the stanza:

1. What were the strongest sounds or words?
2. Did speaking like this make you speak faster or more slowly?
3. What was the feeling or emotion that you felt when speaking this way?
4. Which way do you think was most dramatically effective for this stanza?

EXTENSION
Choose another stanza and experiment with different ways of speaking it.

ACTIVITY TWO
The performance focuses on the various emotional state or personas of Venus. In a small group using the Synopsis (p5): one student reads the synopsis and one student mimes Venus. The other students observe, noting the states of Venus. Consider the behavioural stereotypes that might appear e.g. baby-doll, seductress, dominatrix.
PRE-PERFORMANCE ACTIVITIES

MUSIC ACTIVITY ONE

SETTING VERSE TO MUSIC
In this production excerpts of the poem have been set to music and the songs take the audience into the mood of Venus in different guises of seduction. The first song is suggestive of ‘Mrs Robinson’, as in the The Graduate, where an older woman seduces a much younger man.

ACTIVITY ONE
Imagine you are the composer.
Your brief is to create a song that reflects the mood as described above.
Create your own melody for a song using some or all of the stanzas below.
Use these elements in your composition
1. The Rhythm of the language in the stanzas
2. Tone and melody to reflect the seduction and intention of the characters
3. Instrumentation.

‘Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are gray and bright and quick in turning: 140
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

‘Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell’d hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire. 150

‘Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

‘Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

‘Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear:
Things growing to themselves are growth’s abuse:
Seeds spring from seeds and beauty breedeth beauty;
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.
POST PERFORMANCE ACTIVITIES

ENGLISH

REVIEWING THE PERFORMANCE

ACTIVITY ONE

After seeing the performance, compose your own theatre review. Consider the following:

1. Who is going to read your review? Select a particular audience (e.g. newspaper, internet blog, academic journal).
2. What aspects of the poem were presented in the performance and how were they presented?
3. What theatrical devices and techniques were used? What effect did they have?
4. Your own response to the structure of the poem as a contemporary cabaret-style musical.

DRAMA

RECREATING THE PERFORMANCE

What grabbed your attention and why?

ACTIVITY ONE

In a small group discuss the performance and identify three strong visual moments from the performance. In your group create a still moment (i.e. a tableau or a photograph) of each of those moments. Show these to the rest of the class and as a class discuss the similarities and differences in what each group presented.

ACTIVITY TWO

Reflecting upon the performance

The characters of Venus
Try to list or describe the personas or characters of Venus included in the performance.
Consider
1. the way lines were delivered by the actors,
2. the physical movements and gestures,
3. the direction of gaze, and
4. the tonality of the music.
ACTIVITY THREE
Reflecting upon the performance

1. How was the following stanza presented in the production?

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

2. What was the effect of the
   • vocal delivery?
   • visual directorial choices – blocking, lighting, props?

MUSIC

ACTIVITY
Think back over the performance and answer the following:

1) What was the instrumentation?
2) Describe the vocal harmony used and link to the relevant stanzas of the poem
3) What time signatures were used, link to the relevant stanzas
4) In your opinion what was the most memorable musical moment and why?
VENUS AND ADONIS
(Published in 1593)

‘Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY WRIOTHELY, EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONORABLE,
I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectatioYour honour's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he loved, but love he laugh'd to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-faced suitor 'gins to woo him.

‘Thrice-fairer than myself,' thus she began,
The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

‘Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses;

‘And yet not cloy thy lips with loathed satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty;
Ten kisses short as one, long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'
Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale:
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale:
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears,80
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way. 90

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn:
'O, pity,' gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg, why art thou coy?

'I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar; 100
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally and jest,
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making his arms his field, his tent my bed.

Thus he that overruled I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain:
Strong-tempered steel his stronger strength obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag of thy might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

'Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,--
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red--
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then why not kiss on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where they are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted:
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtured, despised, rheumatic and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean and lacking juice,
Thy beauty in thine looks doth all excuse,
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are gray and bright and quick in turning:
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishevell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear:
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed? 170
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
And so, in spite of death, thou dost survive,
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again,
By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where they are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side. 180

The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
His burning rays do make the heat of this descending sun:
The sun doth burn my face: I must remove.'
’Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel, 3
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth? 4
Art thou a woman’s son, and canst not feel 5
What ’tis to love? how want of love tormenteth? 6
O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind, 7
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

’What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this? 8
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit? 9
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss? 10
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute: 11
Give me one kiss, I’ll give it thee again, 12
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain. 210

’Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone, 211
Well-painted idol, image dun and dead, 212
Statue contenting but the eye alone, 213
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred! 214
Thou art no man, though of a man’s complexion, 215
For men will kiss even by their own direction.’ 216

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue, 217
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause; 218
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth he wrong; 219
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause: 220
And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak, 221
And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head and then his hand, 222
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground; 223
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band: 224
She would, he will not in her arms be bound; 225
And when from thence he struggles to be gone, 226
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

’Fondling,’ she saith, ’since I have hemm’d thee here 227
Within the circuit of this ivory pale, 230
I’ll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer; 231
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale: 232
Graze on my lips; and if those hills be dry, 233
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough, 234
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain, 235
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough, 236
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain 237
Then be my deer, since I am such a park: 238
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.’240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes are more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
His testy master goeth about to take him;
When, lo, the unback’d breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him.

Fiercely he springs and hasteth to his horse.
Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He veils his tail that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say ‘Lo, thus my strength is tried,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say ‘Lo, thus my strength is tried, 280
And this I do to captivate the eye,
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.’

What recketh he his rider’s angry stir, 290
His flattering ‘Holla,’ or his ‘Stand, I say’?
What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
For rich caparisons or trapping gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion’d steed,
So did this horse excel a common one
In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone.

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
Round-hoof’d, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open’d their mouths to swallow Venus’ liking.
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whether he run or fly they know not whether;
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings.

Sometimes he scuds far off and there he stares;
Open’d their mouths to swallow Venus’ liking.

Pity,’ she cries, ‘some favour, some remorse!’
But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbors by,
He veils his tail that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park:
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.’240

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
All swoln with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong
When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love's fire doth assure;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O, what a sight it was, wistily to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy!
To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy!
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing;
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
Her eyes wo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing:
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show'd like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
'O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
And once made perfect, never lost again.'
Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh:
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth,
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;

And all amazed brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent:
Fair fail the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breathed life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth;
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumined with her eye;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine: 490
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

'O, where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I lived, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O, thou didst kill me: kill me once again:
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine, 500
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other, for this cure!
O, never let their crimson liveries wear!
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year.
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me,
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd:
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'Now let me say "Good night," and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss."
'Good night,' quoth she, and, ere he says 'Adieu,'
Incorporate then they seem; face grows to face.
Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth.
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

'O, where am I?' quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth;
But now I lived, and life was death's annoy;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry:
And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage,
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honour's wrack.
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Like a wild bird being tamed with too much handling,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Whose beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
'And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
But if thou needs wilt hunt, be ruled by me;
His eyes, like glow-worms, shine when he doth fret;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being moved, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the wind and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd;
Being ireful, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part, through whom he rushes.
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
For pity now she can no more detain him;
And all in vain: good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be proved;
Her pleading hath deserved a greater fee;
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not loved.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart and whistles in mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Tell me, Love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?
As if another chase were in the skies.

Fie, fie,' he says, 'you crush me; let me go;
Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she, 'sweet boy, ere this,
Whose tushes never sheathed he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.

To clip Elysium and to lack her joy.
Even as poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfet by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But in thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.
And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the wind and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the wind and with what care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
But if thou needs wilt hunt, be ruled by me;
His eyes, like glow-worms, shine when he doth fret;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being moved, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.
Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay;
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never relieved by any.

'Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise: 710
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave?' 'No matter where,' quoth he,
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent.' 'Why, what of that?' quoth she.
'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all 720

'But if thou fall, O, then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy foddering feet,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Last she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

'Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine; 730
Wherein she framed thee in high heaven's despite,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-canker ingrust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme: 770
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood, 740
The morrow-eating sickness, whose attaint
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

'What have you urged that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger:
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger. 790
You do it for increase: O strange excuse,
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
The text is old, the orator too green. Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen: Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.'

'What have you urged that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger:
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger. 790
You do it for increase: O strange excuse,
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

'Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

'Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done;
Both favour, savour, hue and qualities,
Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies;
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzies wood, 740
The morrow-eating sickness, whose attaint
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

'And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's flight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the midday sun.

'Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For, by this black-faced night, desire's foul

'So in thyself thyself art made away;
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-canker ingrust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

'Nay, then,' quoth Adon, 'you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme: 770
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For, by this black-faced night, desire's foul

'If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown
For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there; 780

'Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

'What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
What is thy body but a swallowing grave,'
Here kennell’d in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
‘Gainst venom’d sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth’d mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Shaking their scratch’d ears, bleeding as they go.

Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Look, how the world’s poor people are amazed
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
At apparitions, signs and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,

Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.
By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay;
‘Hard-favour’d tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Hateful divorce of love,’--thus chides she Death,--
Grim-grinning ghost, earth’s worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he lived, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder;
‘If he be dead,--O no, it cannot be,
Appals her senses and her spirit confounds.
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it:--
And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
‘Ay me!’ she cries, and twenty times ‘Woe, woe!’

And twenty echoes twenty cry so.

She marking them begins a wailing note
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrill and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty;
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.
End without audience and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call,
Sooth the humour of fantastic wits?
She says ‘Tis so;’ they answer all ‘Tis so;’
And would say after her, if she said ‘No.’

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
For lovers’ hours are long, though seeming short:

Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:--
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
If pleased themselves, others, they think, delight
In such-like circumstance, with suchlike sport:
Since her best work is ruin’d with thy rigour.’

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o’erworn,
And with that word she spied the hunted boar,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish’d gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
‘O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.’

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o’erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And back retires to rate the boar for murther.

This way runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.
Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,910
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting;
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell’d in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
‘Gainst venom’d sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth’d mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Shaking their scratch’d ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world’s poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay;
‘Hard-favour’d tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Hateful divorce of love,’--thus chides she Death,--
Grim-grinning ghost, earth’s worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
Who when he lived, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder;
‘If he be dead,--O no, it cannot be,
Appals her senses and her spirit confounds.
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it:--
And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call,
Sooth the humour of fantastic wits?
She says ‘Tis so;’ they answer all ‘Tis so;’
And would say after her, if she said ‘No.’

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
For lovers’ hours are long, though seeming short:

Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:--
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
If pleased themselves, others, they think, delight
In such-like circumstance, with suchlike sport:
Since her best work is ruin’d with thy rigour.’

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o’erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And back retires to rate the boar for murther.

This way runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murther.
Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,910
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting;
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.
Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopt
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropt;
But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again. 960

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow that friendly sights sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief;970
But none is best: then join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollor;
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well:
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being prison'd in her eye like pearls in glass; 980
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous:
The one doth flatten thee in thoughts unlikely,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly. 990

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him, all-to naught:
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She cleps him king of graves and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
Which knows no pity, but is still severe; 1000
Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provoked my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead! 1070
O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well:
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty lived and died with him. 1080

Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew;
Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of her troubled brain;1040
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
Which knows no pity, but is still severe; 1000
Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.
'Tis not my fault: the boar provoked my tongue; 1010
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories
His victories, his triumphs and his glories.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew;
Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again;
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head:

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead! 1070
O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well:
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty lived and died with him. 1080

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
The sun doth scorn you and the wind doth hiss you:
When Adonis lived, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:
And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off and, being gone,
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
If he did see his face, why then I know
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But a kiss thought to persuade him there;
His youth with his; the more am I accus't.
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accus't.
She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told;
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps, burn't out in darkness lies;
Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
'Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy:
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.
'It shall be fickle, false and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb and teach the fool to speak.
'It shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures:
'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.
She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is rent from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.
'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy fathers guise--
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire--
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire:
To witter in my breast as in his blood.
'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.'
Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

© Bell Shakespeare Education 2009
REFERENCES

http://englishhistory.net/keats/poetry/odeonmelancholy.html

http://www.pantheon.org/articles/v/venus.html

http://www.pantheon.org/articles/v/adonis.html